How your week works

Each course meets three times a week on fixed days. You attend the three weekly sessions for your level. Adult sessions last 2 hours, so 6 hours per week.

Live on Google Meet

All classes are live, in small groups of up to 5 students, held on Google Classroom and Google Meet. You receive a class invitation to accept.

Faster to your level

The intensive rhythm keeps the full course hours but delivers them in less time, so each level is completed in about two months instead of three.

Packs and progression

If you join a pack (A1 to A2, or B1 to B2), you begin with the first level and move up to the next once your group completes it.

Course Overview and Duration

Estimated time to complete each DELF level with the intensive rhythm of three live sessions per week (2 hours each, so 6 hours per week). The full course hours are unchanged, only the pace is faster.

Durations are minimum estimates assuming regular attendance with no breaks. Real timelines may be a little longer.

Individual levels

Level	Total hours	Rhythm	Estimated duration
DELF A1	48 h	3 x 2h / week	about 8 weeks (2 months)
DELF A2	50 h	3 x 2h / week	about 9 weeks (2 months)
DELF B1	56 h	3 x 2h / week	about 10 weeks (2.5 months)
DELF B2	60 h	3 x 2h / week	about 10 weeks (2.5 months)

Pack B1 to B2	116 h	about 20 weeks (5 months)
Full pathway A1 to B2	214 h	about 36 weeks (9 months)

French for Canada (Express Entry)

For French points in Canadian immigration, the usual target is around NCLC 7, which corresponds to roughly a B2 level on the European scale. A complete beginner aiming for B2 should plan for the full A1 to B2 pathway, about nine months at the intensive pace. Exact score thresholds and points are set by IRCC and can change, so they should always be checked on the official Canadian immigration website or with an immigration advisor. IIOFL prepares your French level and does not provide immigration advice.
